polylabs GmbH and The FuturICT Project

To whom it may concern,

We would like to take this opportunity to show our support for the development of the FuturICT Project.

polylabs GmbH is a small fast growing Web Development StartUp based in Switzerland. We employ agile project management in our development process and through this can provide our clients with outstanding results in record breaking time.

The FuturICT Project is quite the craze at the office as it incorporates our daily tasks and our interestes as IT Specialists. FuturICT amazes us due its apparent advantages that it will bring to our society, our economy and also our StartUp. We are confronted with big data projects and often dream of a system, method or process that would allow us to attain and organise data in such a way that it can be viewed and analysed without previous analytical experience; quick, easy and usable.

Our company encourages the further development of the project and would be honoured to contribute in resources, testing and development within acceptable parameters on request.

We look forward to seeing the project grow, and our company with it. It would be a definitive advantage to our core development projects as well as our business development, for its research, usability and availability.

Kind Regards
